The Ballad of the Dragons

183 9 15

Chapter 1 by Alice Marie Bride

*High are the heads we hold,
As we create terror in stories told,
Bloodshed, bloodshed, wars of old,
Let our legends be renowned with voices bold.*

*Mighty are we that lie in wait,
As we watch our prey- helpless bait,
Bloodshed, Bloodshed, don't be late,
Let our bellies fill with what we've ate.*

*Low are the tails of any foe,
As small as a meager human's toe,
Bloodshed, Bloodshed, in debt they owe,
Let our fury and fire flow.*

Chapter 2 by Jenny Neill

Want to write a story about dragons?
Sing me a song of the dragon's song?
We sing according to the old folk song.

Unlike mortals so in lou
Singing, Singing, hearts so true
Hoping for completion, too./

/We do hope for better suns
Better tomorrows, hit home run
Singing, Singing, hoping some
Hoping good tomorrows come./

Chapter 3 by Adisoccer1223

And our dreams will be complete
If our supplies weren't replete
Dying, Dying, Don't repeat
For death I don't want to meet.

We keep on fighting, one and all
Standing together, we are tall
Dying, dying, the lord answers our call
So that we no longer have to stall

Yelling, cheering, we march on,
Singing and crying to our song
Dying, dying, shall soon be gone
For we have done nothing wrong.

Chapter 4 by Alice Marie Bride

*Soaring, searching, flying high,
Our mighty wings grace the sky,
For in armies we ride,
Taking enemies in stride.*

Women fighting children in war

*Befowled and defeated they ran away,
Leaving us to pillage for another day,
Dragons, fearful, horrible we are,
Hear our roars, near and far.*

Chapter 5 by Fay Sojourner

Burning red Fire
Is our greatest desire
Across the kingdoms of old
Just to be stories and folk tales told

No Mortal dares to venture far
Ye who wonders about the stars
Those who lust and those who hate
Dare to befriend us to change the fate

To ruin marvelous fortunes
To cause darkness to be fortune
To end the sun's light
And bring enteral night

So, dragon-slayer, if you try
To make us leave, you will die
How can it be for honor or glory,
When you perish in this story?

We will laugh at your death
We will rejoice in your final breath
For your life is meaningless
And you are a dirty little pest

You do not have the right
You cannot have the right
It will end in me and you
Leaving nothing but ash

Chapter 6 by NemoNobody

We don't know the meaning of mercy and sorrow
It is night in the castle when we cast a shadow
We are kings and queens from dusk to dawn
Sing our song, here we go

Blood, pain and death, we leave ruling behind
Our fathers were the greatest, the horrific nine
We are the creatures whose eyes made of stone
Sing our song, here we go

You can pray to your gods, but they will keep silent
We came from the lands where all valleys are violet
A thousand suns are in our hearts, kneel and bow
Sing our song, here we go

Chapter 7 by Haidenracer

When war arrives love goes lost
When fear? It's heart in frost
Run and run until exhaust
Until the war is left and crossed

Death is a memory
Let's waste energy
Run and run for a deafening century
Until war has left with treachery

Love is stronger in our mind
Felt so much til' goes blind
Run and run until we find

Give up, give up
Our love is up

Run and run—quick speed up!

Until the light has gone back up

Chapter 8 by Tess MacMahon (S)

Hear our deafening dragon cry

As we take to the endless sky

Flying, flying, never die

Know that we can smell a lie

See the dawn,

We right the wrong

Wishing, waiting, for a song

Take our hoards of gold along

Fleeing death and the angry village

We have brought to them a new age

Screaming, screaming, they set the stage

Fueling an ancient rage

We fought with them as they fought us

Disturbing our draconian lust

Breaking, breaking, tearing trust

For a reason lost to dust

History will end in pain

Wars and battles die in shame

Ending, ending, end the reign

Once we lost, now we reclaim

~~ Awesome poem. I love it! ~~
